JUDICIAL PROBE IS DELAYED A WEEK BY THE INVESTIGATORS

Do Not Desire Inquiry to Interfere With Court Proceedings.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE CAUSES

Philadelphia Newspaper Declares That Fight Over Democratic Leadership in State is Back of Inquiry; Humes in After Sterling's Scalp.

The preliminary inquiry into the charges which involve the two Fayette County judges has been postponed for a week and will not begin until June 19, when the legislative committee will meet in Uniontown. The hearing was postponed a week because of the Criminal Court session now on. It is said that no time will be lost when the inquiry begins, although the inquiry will be searching.

The committee appointed by Speaker Alter includes two Republicans, one member of the Washington party, and two Democrats. Samuel A. Whitaker is a Republican who had a Bull Moose endorsement. He is a nephew of ex-Governor Pennypacker. Cleon N. Barthelzel was elected on the Republican ticket with Washington party endorsement. Joseph H. Defrees was elected on a straight Washington party ticket. John M. Flynn is a Guffey Democrat and A. P. Coniff a reorganizer and close friend of E. Lowry Humes.

Concerning the impeachment proceedings, and the motives behind it, the Philadelphia Public Ledger reaches the conclusion that the row between the rival factions in the Democratic state organization is largely responsible. This was the inference drawn by The Courier when the charges were first filed. The Harrisburg correspondent of the Public Ledger says:

"Impeachment proceedings against Judges Robert E. Umbel and John Q. Van Swearingen, of Fayette County, will play an important part in the Democratic politics of the state, as the charges filed by Horatio S. Dumbauld implicate Bruce F. Sterling, candidate for Democratic State Chairman, to succeed George W. Guthrie. It is apparent that there is already a split in the reorganization forces of the Democratic party.

"E. Lowry Humes, caucus chairman of the Democrats in the House and an aspirant for state chairman, is taking an active part in the impeachment proceedings. Had it not been for Humes' action the charges against the Fayette County jurists probably would have been tabled.

"The belief of many members of the Legislature is that the whole case is aimed to put Sterling on the shelf. Dumbauld conferred with Humes before he filed the charges against Judge Umbel, and together they went to Speaker Alter to discuss the prospective proceedings before the petition had been filed. Humes is said to have remarked that Dumbauld told him that he did not care whether Judge Umbel was impeached, but that he wanted to get the matter before the public.

"It was learned that just before the report of the judicial general committee was presented in the House, Representatives Stein and Humes agreed to support an investigation. Humes had been taken into the confidence of the Fayette members, who had lined up a strong array to table the report of the committee. When it was discovered that Humes had instigated the acceptance of the report and voted in committee to recommend that testimony be heard, the Fayette members believed themselves to have been 'double-crossed.'"

FARRELL IS SUED.

State Would Force Building of Sanitary Sewers.

HARRISBURG, June 6.—State Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon has directed institution of suit against the Borough of Farrell to enjoin issuance of $125,000 of bonds for municipal water plant, on the ground that it was against public policy.

The borough has been ordered to prepare plans for a sewage disposal plant, but has failed to comply. The debt limit of the borough would practically be reached by the sale of the water bonds, which will prevent it from making expenditures for sewage disposal. Suit has also been brought against the borough for extending sewers without a state permit.

Disappointed Employe Murders Ticket Agent in the Pittsburg Union Station

United Press Telegram.

PITTSBURG, June 6.—Discontented over his wages and failure to secure a promotion, William Sage, a clerk in the ticket office of the Pennsylvania railroad passenger station here at noon shot and killed James McNair, chief ticket agent, and wounded Ralph Pauley, McNair's chief clerk. Sage escaped.

During the morning Sage visited the office of General Manager R. L. O'Donnel, and it is said he contemplated the murder of that official. The latter's office, however, was crowded by a score of people when Sage entered and he was unable to accomplish the deed.

Returning first to his office on the second floor of the passenger station, Sage made preparations for the murder of McNair by providing a method of escape and then went down to the first floor and knocked on McNair's door.

When the ticket agent opened the door, Sage entered and began upbraiding him for his failure to promote him and increase his salary. McNair took a seat in a chair in front of his desk and as he turned away, Sage whipped a revolver from his pocket and started shooting. The first bullet instantly killed McNair who crumpled up, falling over his desk. The second struck Pauley who rushed to McNair's assistance.

The bullet that struck the chief clerk inflicted a scalp wound and stunned him so that he fell to the floor, where he lay unconscious. Sage then turned the weapon on himself, firing one shot which went wild.

After failing to commit suicide, Sage gave up the thought of taking his own life and made his way through the open door of the ticket office to the baggage room, and thence to freedom.

The shooting occurred at a time when the station was filled with people. Hundreds were in the station and the sounds of the shots were plainly heard.

Employes who rushed into the ticket office following the shooting summoned the police and detectives are now seaching for the murder. It is believed that his capture will soon be effected. He has not had time to leave the city and his favorite haunts are being shadowed.

WOOL TRUST HEAD'S FATE IS NOW IN HANDS OF JURY

United Press Telegram.

BOSTON, June 6.—The Wood case went to the jury today. Immediately after the convening of court, Judge Crosby ordered the doors closed and began his charge to the jury. The sixth count of the indictment against the defendants was dropped yesterday afternoon at the direction of the court. It charged Wood, Attaux and Collins with conspiring with J. J. Breen, the Lawrence undertaker and Ernest Pitman, to place dynamite in houses for the purpose of destroying buildings and taking life. This left five counts in the indictment. They allege unlawful possession of dynamite, conspiracy to injure Lawrence strikers and attempts to damage property.

The trial has been the most bitterly contested in the history of the state, despite the fact that the defendants can only be convicted of a misdemeanor which is punishable by imprisonment in the house of correction, a fine, or both.

Because of the assistance furnished the state, Collins, who turned state's evidence admitting that he assisted in the placing of the dynamite, will go free.

Morris Shuman a juror was taken out of the jury box this morning by the court, and the judge and attorneys for both sides questioned him closely. It had been whispered about the courtroom that Shuman had expressed an opinion concerning the case.

RICH MAN TESTIFIES

United Press Telegram.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—More wealth was paraded before the Senate lobby investigating committee this morning, when Senator George T. Oliver of Pennsylvania testified that he is worth $7,500,000. Oliver was the first witness to take the stand when Asa Bandnas were resumed. Oliver testified that he has $1,500,000 invested in two Pittsburg newspapers; that he owns a paper mill which is worth $100,000; that he owns 1,000 shares of United States Steel preferred and 50 shares of steel common stock, worth $1[illegible]; that he owns 7,000 shares of p[illegible] and 50 shares of common stock [illegible] Pittsburg Coal Company. He said that he is interested in the copper business, but refused to state to what extent.

Senator Cummings endeavored to have the Pennsylvanian testify, concerning bank stock he owns, contending that it was relevant inasmuch as it comes under the provisions of the income tax. Chairman Overman, however, overruled the question.

EARLY ACTION LOOKED FOR

No Difficulty Expected in Reaching Agreement on Clark Bill.

United Press Telegram.

HARRISBURG, June 6.—The conference committee appointed to adjust the differences between the two houses over amendments to the Clark bill providing commission form of government for cities of the third class is expected to make a report before the latter part of next week.

The differences are slight and arose chiefly through amendments to the measure. It is thought that they will be easily adjusted. Among the changes advocated by the House are increasing the number of voters for a referendum from 15 to 20 per cent and relative to the duties of mayors and controllers.

CROSS SUITS FILED.

Case Against One Settled; Then He Has Prosecutor Arrested.

Charged with threatening to kill Cesare Rotondi, Rocco Santoro, of Peach street, was arraigned before Squire Lawrence Donegan yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff asserted that Santoro threatened to stab him and cut his head off when he refused to return a phonograph owned by Santoro which he was keeping until the defendant paid a bill he owed him.

Santoro denied the charge and the case was dropped, the costs being evenly divided between plaintiff and defendant. Following the disposition of the case, Santoro had Rotondi arrested for stealing the phonograph. The defendant was bound over for court.

RECESS IS TALKED OF

Legislature May be Called to Meet Again in the Fall.

Special to The Courier.

HARRISBURG, June 6.—The story is going the rounds in Harrisburg that the Legislature will be recessed until after the November elections by Governor Tener. Legislators are skeptical. The Governor has no authority to declare a recess of the Legislature unless the two houses fail to agree on an adjournment date, and matters have not yet reached that point. In any event, it is not possible for the Governor to declare a recess for longer than four months, which would not bring the reconvening time past election day. Governor Tener is said to plan a fight to gain his point in workmen's compensation legislation.

A fight is being made over the appropriation bills and it is possible that some of the colleges may fail to receive anticipated contributions from the state. The University of Pennsylvania and University of Pittsburg are to have their appropriations slashed, according to indications during the debate in the House before it adjourned for the week last night.

BRUFF IS ACQUITTED

Allegheny County Sheriff is Freed on Graft Charges.

United Press Telegram.

PITTSBURG, June 6.—Judd H. Bruff sheriff of Allegheny County, was today acquitted of the charges of embezzlement, misdeamor and perjury preferred against him several weeks ago. The jury after being out two hours and ten minutes returned a sealed verdict last night which was opened this morning.

Joseph Wright, record clerk in the sheriff's office, was today held under $5,000 bail following his arrest yesterday as the result of testimony given during the progress of the case. He testified to the collection of costs which the books of the sheriff's office did not show were paid over to the official.

The testimony of Wright and of bank officials who asserted that Bruff had never made arrangements for the payment of interest on county funds assured the defendant's acquittal. Other testimony went to show that he was not guilty of the charges.

ORGANIZED CHARITY IS STILL IN FORCE TO HELP THE POOR

MRS. BAMFORD'S WORK GOES ON

Rev. J. L. Proudfit, Chairman of the Civic Organization's Charity Committee Follows Out Policy of Co-operation to Get Best Results.

Although the little woman whose many acts of kindness endeared her to the poor and destitute of town is numbered among the dead, the good work of charity in Mrs. John J. Bamford was much interested still continues. Rev. J. L. Proudfit, chairman of the committee on charity of the Chamber of Commerce, has general supervision of relief work in the borough and acts in conjunction with Captain Bamford of the Salvation Army.

When Mrs. Bamford was living she gave relief to scores of destitute persons. When cases of want were reported to the Salvation Army she usually conferred with Rev. Mr. Proudit to learn whether the Chamber of Commerce had made an effort to provide for them. In the same manner, the chairman of the committee on charity conferred with Mrs. Bamford and thus the danger of both assisting the same case was eliminated. This practise is continued between Mr. Proudfit and the Salvation Army captain.

The minister stated today that there are few cases of destitution within the borough at the present time. During the month of May only a nominal number was reported.

"It is during the winter months that poor families suffer most," he said. "When the weather is cold, they require clothing and fuel and an extra quantity of food is needed. Children, too, attend school and they have to be clothed presentably.

"When there is an able-bodied man at the head of a family," he continued, "there is no necessity for them to go without the actual necessities of life. Labor is in demand, and the pay is good. Only the other day an employer declared to me that he has plenty of work for laborers and is paying his men $2 a day, but yet he is unable to get all of the men he needs."

WANTS FLIES DISCOURAGED

With the advent of warm weather, swarms of flies find favorite breeding places about the unprotected fruit stands and little effort, it is said, is being taken by the majority of dealers to guard against the inroads of the insect that scatters disease germs. The small dealers, the foreigners with their open front shops and benches laden with fruit are the most careless.

Discussing the matter today, Secretary of the Board of Health A. B. Hood asserted that an ordinance should be passed compelling fruit dealers to screen their fruit and vegetables. A wire screen or a glass enclosure would provide adequate protecton. At the present time the only act is a state measure, which provides that all greenstuffs exposed on sidewalks must be placed 18 inches above ground.

As vegetable matter is one of the best insect-breeding places, flies have a great liking for unprotected fruit stands.

He also spoke on the grand rally to be held on the evening of June 24, in the Pittsburg music hall. At the close of the meeting supper was served in the diningroom of the church.

The convention last evening convened at 7.15 instead of 7.30, in order to give the missionaries another opportunity to tell of their work. It was a response to the general demand of the convention. The song service was in charge of A. J. Be Schumaker of Pittsburg. J. H. Vitchestan of Pittsburg gave an interesting and stirring address on "Temperance." This was was followed by an address on "Denominational Dangers" by H. P. Donner. At the request of the convention F. K. Singiser gave a talk on his acceptance of the appointment as pastor of the English Immanuel Baptist Church in Rangoon, Burma. He expects to sail in the fall. The convention then adjourned.

AUTO CLUB MEETS AND PLANS A PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

Governing Committee Appointed to Prepare By-Laws; Permanent Quarters Desired.

The automobile club met last night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms and perfected an organization by the election of a governing committee to prepare by-laws for the regulation of the club. The meeting began at 8 o'clock with President George A. Munson in the chair, but within a short time he was obliged to leave and Vice President Frank Tarr took charge of the proceedings.

Besides the selection of the governing committee, good roads were the chief topics under consideration. Several members of the club discussed propositions to improve highways in this end of the county. Proposals were offered, but no definite steps were taken.

The governing committee between now and the next meeting, will prepare a list of committees to have charge of the various departments of the organizations. One of the committees will direct the membership campaign, another will have charge of finance, while a third will supervise the good roads movement.

To increase the membership as rapidly as possible, during the next few weeks the initiation fee will be $3. This will be increased to $5 when the membership campaign closes.

Although nothing was done about securing quarters, it is the intention of the club to rent rooms as soon as possible and something along this line will probably be proposed at the next meeting, to be held at the call of the president.

COUNCIL HOLDS A LONG SESSION; IT RUNS TO STREETS

Snydertown Residents Want Brick Paving Used There.

NEW ORDINANCE IS ORDERED

No Move is Made to Oust Borough Jobholders but Engineer is Told He Must Keep Maps in the City Hall; Ninth Street Dispute Settled.

A long session of Town Council was held last night, streets being the chief matters considered. Council met shortly after 8 o'clock and was in session for two one-half hours. A disagreement between the president and Cyrus M. Stoner for a time promised interesting developments, but finally fizzled out. Mr. Stoner had made a motion providing that Colonel J. M. Reid, in return for the donation of a parcel of land to the borough, be exonerated from payment of $1,000, the amount of a paving lien. After stating that the borough had not been presented with a deed for the ground, Mr. Friel announced that the motion was out of order.

The rumor that certain members of council contemplated the removal of Borough Engineer C. F. Hirst and Solicitor F. D. Munson caused several members to be on hand who have not attended meetings with any degree of frequency lately. The only step was that the engineer be directed to move all maps and profiles to the municipal building.

Progress was reported by H. C. Hays, chairman of the joint meeting of the light and finance committees, held for the purpose of conferring with J. George Kaelber, the Rochester representative of electric interests seeking a franchise here. The ordinance committee was directed to prepare an ordinance and meet with the light and finance committees before the next sesson of council.

The laying of sidewalks on Ninth street, West Side, was the first street matter considered. Since the property owners along the thoroughfare were directed to lay sidewalks they have been unable to agree on the style of walk. Three petitions signed by property owners were presented to council. A motion prevailed that all property owners the length of South Ninth street be required to lay a five-foot combination curb and sidewalk.

Appearing for South Connellsville borough, Attorney F. E. Younkin asked that Connellsville pay one half of the cost of repairing Gibson avenue, which work had been done several months ago by the authorities of the adjoining borough. The total cost of the work was $327.60. The claim was referred to the street committee.

Mr. Brennen called attention to the condition of th curbing on Seventh street, West Side. Owners of the curb will be notified it must be placed in better condition than which it is now.

Property owners of Hill street presented a petition asking that all residents of the thoroughfare be directed to lay sidewalks. It was granted. A request of John Parkhill for a grade at his property, corner of Woodlawn avenue and King street, resulted in the borough engineer being ordered to establish a grade there. Frank Dull complained of the presence of a Bell telephone pole in front of his Murphy avenue property. The company will be instructed to remove it.

Attorney Younkin brought up the matter of a grade for Robbins street which was broached in council a year ago. He declared that the property-holders of the street desire to lay sidewalks but are unable because of the lack of grade. After a short controversy, a motion that the borough engineer be instructed to give the grade carried.

Maps showing a profile of the proposed concrete steps to be erected on Gallatin avenue were presented by Mr. Hirst. The steps, Mr. Clark asserted, are absolutely necessary. The engineer estimated that the steps if erected in the center of the thoroughfare will cost $360, but if a set is built on each side of the street, the expense will be approximately $560. It was decided to accept the plans and to advertise for bids.

Two claims for damages to automobiles were referred to the borough solicitor to confer with the Connellsville Water Company. One was for $40 and the other $150.63. The bad condition of Snyder street was blamed.

Although the report of the viewers in the case of the Veech estate, A. S. Haddock and H. T. Crossland who contend that their properties on Main street, West Side, were damaged when the brick paving was laid, has not been made public, Attorney Munson announced that the Veech estate will be allowed $875 and Haddock and Crossland each $400. The viewers, he said, based their awards on the cost of erecting retaining walls about the properties. One of the trio, the Veech estate, plans to contest the finding, but the other complainants are apparently satisfied, and the solicitor is prepared to take up appeals.

G. B. Freed, a property owner, broached the question of paving Snyder street. He presented a petition signed by the majority of the residents of the thoroughfare protesting against macadamizing the street and asking for brick paving. Contractor Bernard O'Connor, who has the contract for laying macadam, announced that if a decision was reached to change the style of paving material to be used on the street he would not hold the borough to its contract with

JUNE BRIDES

What Those Who Wish to be Happy Should Do.

Many Connellsville lads and lassies have been pierced by Cupid's arrow and there will be quite a number of weddings this month. The June bride who wishes to be happy, not merely during the honeymoon but all her life should have a savings account. There can be no permanent happiness in the home unless the wife's saving and thrifty. Her husband's success depends largely upon her ability to save, and the best place a bride can have her savings account is in the Youch Trust Company, because that institution is not only a sound bank, paying 4%, but a faithful advisor, agent and trustee. All her life a woman can depend upon "The Yough" for helpful service in money matters. —Adv.

Interesting Experiments.

For the mental or manual worker there is no other beverage so refreshing and stimulating as a cup of good coffee, pure and fresh. Professors Kraepelin, of Germany, and Rivers, of England, conducted experiments which proved that coffee increases muscular and mental efficiency, and capacity for action. "BREAKFAST CHEER" coffee is a brand highly recommended for its delicious flavor and excellent results. Served either with cream, or without, it makes an ideal beverage for breakfast or dinner. "BREAKFAST CHEER" coffee actually banishes weariness and exhaustion and does not merely obscure the effects of fatigue. Your dealer has "BREAKFAST CHEER" coffee.—Adv.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS ASTONISHED

Anybody can afford to pay 50 cents to get rid of terrible Rheumatism, Sciatica or Gout, and that's all RHEUMA costs at A. A. Clarke's and he says if it doesn't do all that is claimed for it, money back.

It's wonderful how speedily this simple remedy takes hold and how the sore muscles limber up and the swollen joints come down to normal. Make no mistake—RHEUMA costs but little, but it's the best remedy you can find to drive Rheumatic poison from the system and bring back health to miserv-racked bodies.

"I had Rheumatism for a long while, and tried many medicines, but was not cured until I used RHEUMA. I cannot praise RHEUMA too highly. My advice to those suffering from Rheumatism is to use this great remedy, as I believe it will effect a permanent cure in any case."—C. B. Latham, Sattes, W. Va., April 27, 1912. —Advertisement.

him. The petitions were finally referred to the ordinance committee with instructions to prepare an ordinance for paving the road.

A motion by Decker that the street committee arrange to meet with the trustees of the Carnegie Free Library to consider the paving of Baldwin avenue carried.

On recommendation of Stoner, Martin Ringler was appointed to fill the vacancy created in the paid fire department by the resignation of Walter Artis.

An ordinance for the grading of Gibson avenue from Main to Park streets was carried. Burgess Evans' report for the month of May was read and ordered received and filed.

Wherever you travel, you will note that the best-dressed men wear shoes like yours—if you wear Regals.

The young fellows who are keen after "high toe" effects will find in the Bump just the shoe they are looking for. It has a full high toe with plenty of outside "swing." The heel is high, too, as is the arch. For all these "high" effects, the Bump fits perfectly and gives a large measure of comfort as long as it is worn, keeping its original shape until discarded.

The Talk of the City

"The Witching Food"

This new corn creation—hardly 30 days old—is already the talk of the city.

We call it Corn Puffs. But it goes by the name "The Witching Food"—the name which users gave it.

It is the inner part of white corn made into globules, then puffed.

Crisp drops of corn, made to instantly melt into almond-flavored granules.

It is the daintiest breakfast dish you ever knew, and it took us ten years to perfect it. Try it while it's new.

THE IMPEACHMENT INQUIRY.

The taking of testimony in the impeachment proceedings against Judge Umbel will be commenced in Fayette county June 10th, next, by a special committee of the Legislature. Now that the matter has been opened up, it is agreed generally that the inquiry should be searching and the findings convincing, not only as to Judge Umbel, but also as to Judge Van Swearingen and all others implicated, to the end that if innocent the personal and official characters of the accused may be fully vindicated. It will be remembered that the Uniontown Herald demanded that the charges against Judge Umbel be probed "to the bottom," and now that the inquiry has broadened the Connellsville News takes this broad view of it:

"These preliminary steps are perhaps for the best. The publicity given the matter occasioned much speculation. The people of the county were not inclined to place much credence in statements made by a disappointed and vengeful antagonist of Judge Umbel, and will be all the better satisfied to have the annoying incident cleared up. Judge Umbel and his friends will also be better satisfied to have the details of this controversy exploited in the fullest sense, and will doubtless give to the investigators every assistance.

"The including of Judge Van Swearingen in the investigation tends to broaden it. Even if he is referred to only by implication he would not be satisfied to have even the semblance of a stigma attached to his record either before or after he went to the bench. Since the House has so decided let there be no halting now. The clearing of the reputations of two of Fayette county's most prominent public officials demands an inquiry at once rigorous and searching."

When the impeachment proceedings were filed. The Courier voiced a strong suspicion that they were the result of Democratic factional politics, and the chief aim was not to impeach Judge Umbel but to destroy the political influence of Chairman Sterling in state and national Democratic circles. This view is confirmed in a circumstantial report reprinted from a prominent and reliable Philadelphia paper, from which it appears that the Honorable E. Lowry Humes, who poses as the Democratic floor leader in the House at Harrisburg, and who wants to be State Chairman, is one of the promoters of the prosecution. He desires to eliminate Sterling as a State Chairmanship possibility. He is not particular whether he eliminates anybody else or not. Horatio Sparks Dumbauld, the author of the charges, would like to eliminate Judge Umbel, and he is not particular who else; in fact, it is stated that he is not particular whether he "gets" the judge, just so he basks in the limelight for the fleeting moment and for the same brief period makes it unpleasant for his ancient enemies.

It is evident that these proceedings have been brought to serve political rather than public purposes; but since the charges have been blazoned forth we concur in the view that the investigation should be made; and that it should be dispassionate and nonpartisan, but thorough and complete.

Attorney Fulton admits that he writes for the Uniontown Critic, but he excuses himself on the ground that Attorney Higbee writes for the Connellsville News. Perhaps Counselor Higbee is an editor as well as the president of the Connellsville newspaper, but if so he ought to sign his articles. Not all of them would be creditable to him.

The habit of laying sticks of dynamite on the railroad tracks of the Lower Connellsville coke region should be discouraged by sending the careless people into retirement where they can think it over long and carefully. At the same time, the companies who use explosives should try to guard them more effectually against meddlesome marauders.

Auto drivers without lights ought to be pinched under the auto ordinance. Autos with lights are dangerous enough to pedestrians.

When one editor ignores the statements and deductions of another, and answers argument only by personal jibes, he writes himself down as one afflicted, not perhaps with fat bumps of conceit, but certainly with deep indentations of dear ignorance.

The insidious Lobby remains an invisible Imagination.

The prospects of the Youghiogheny flood and power dam between Somerfield and Friendsville begin to look better. It is the first forward step in a great conservation movement whose importance has been little understood and less heeded.

The United States Steel Corporation has nothing to say on the Democratic Tariff bill, and the fact has been construed to mean that the corporation has no objection to the bill. The corporation is perhaps too busy defending its right to exist to bother about the Tariff terms upon which it will be allowed to live.

The Connellsville school children are not interested in politics, but they are strong for the Re-Coyle.

After the Washington "lobbyists" have all been heard, perhaps the closed doors of the Democratic Tariff policy will be slightly ajar.

The energetic Connellsville News takes turn about in selling the Dunbar furnace and the Dunbar & New Haven railroad. It might be mentioned in this connection that these properties are still for sale.

There is probably more politics in the Fayette county judicial investigations than there is in the Allegheny county school superintendent mix-up.

The school children opened the picnic season wide enough to let in the whole countryside.

Jack Johnson got off with one year in the Pen, and he wants to get out of that. Some people don't know when they are lucky.

The Young Men's Christian Association program is more ambitious than discreet.

The Klondike dynamiter has been run down with commendable promptness. His defense is that he was drunk and did not know what he was doing. It might be well to start a probe to find out where he got the dynamite and the drunk.

The Baptist Association will be followed by the Lutheran Synod. Godliness loves to gather in Connellsville. The Sporting Center is over on Redstone creek.

The Legislature has pulled the fangs of the loan sharks.

The removal of the borough solicitor and the borough engineer because of personal prejudice would be undignified, unjust and unwise. It is also improbable.

The West Side public building has a new tile, but it's not of straw.

Connellsville is a Baptist town this week.

If there is anything in the United States Steel Corporation's history which is not made public at the present hearings, it won't be worth printing.

The steel trade has more courage than prospects, more present optimism than forward orders. Faith has saved many a dubious situation.

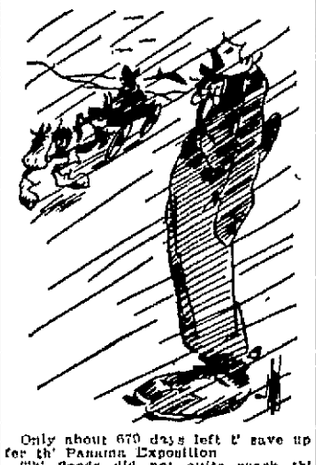

Woman Suffrage is largely a woman fashion, and feminine fashions change so.

Things are looking up. The Young Men's Christian Association is going into the banking business. To the best of our recollection it never had money to lend before

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON

The Famous Prose Poet

Sunshine in the House

"WE'LL have a new boarder here tomorrow," announced the landlady. "He was here this afternoon making arrangements, and he is a perfectly charming man. Even the little talk I had with him made me feel better, for he is a born optimist. He says his motto is 'Keep Smiling' and he never has time to be discouraged. I'm sure such a man in the house will do us all good."

"Such a man in the house is more likely to drive us all to strong drink," said the star boarder, "and I for one won't submit patiently to his optimism. It seems passing strange that these 'Keep Smiling' specialists are in such favor nowadays. In the saner days when I was young the man who lived up to such a motto as that would be surrounded by his friends and relatives and removed to the asylum with promptness and dispatch.

"Nowadays the faith cure appears to be the universal panacea. The country is full of optimists who insist that there is no trouble in the world, that pain is a pipe dream, and sorrow a gold brick. They are carrying this foolish theory to unheard of extremes. A friend of mine died the other day because he was convinced that there is no such thing as disease. Medical friends tried to wise him up to the treatment, saying that he had Mr. Bright's celebrated family disease, but my friend, who was named Spink, laughed them to scorn, saying that there never was such a man as Mr. Bright; and even if there had been such a man as Bright, he wouldn't have had a controlling interest in a disease. Spink insisted that he was in perfect health until the last, and his surprise must have been great when he found that he was dead.

"I went to the funeral, Mrs. Jiggers, prepared to shed a few real tears, but there was no occasion for tears. All the optimists in the neighborhood were there. They were their customary cast iron smiles and refused to be cast down for a moment. They patted the widow on the back and told her to dance and sing, and that stricken woman, having contracted the prevailing mania, acted as though the death of a husband was merely part of the day's work. In my younger days such conduct would have been considered a disgrace. If a woman lost her husband she was expected to go through the motions of mourning, no matter what her private sentiments may have been. She put on a melancholy front and bought up all the widow's weeds at the corner store, for a year or two used stationery with a black border an inch wide, and everybody respected her for it.

"Pessimism is man's natural frame of mind, Mrs. Jiggers, and optimism is merely a cheap disguise. All optimists are whited sepulchres. There is a base design back of their sunshine. They expect to run for office or lecture on the Chautauqua circuit, or receive ten cents a line for poetry from the uplift magazines. No man ever indulged in optimism unless he had some unworthy object. I expect that this new boarder, who lifted your soul from the slough of despond, will be asking us to subscribe for the Life and Letters of Mrs. Pankhurst, in ten volumes. When I see a man coming toward me with one of those dance-and-sing smiles on his face, I begin to wonder which leg he intends to pull.

"A man may smile and smile and be a villain, as the poet says, and he usually is. The man of sterling worth is thinking of serious things, and doesn't smile unless somebody offers to lend him $7. When I see a man with a chronic smile on his face I always think of the old-fashioned photographs. The photographer of the old days was feverishly anxious that his patients should look happy and contented, and when he posed you before his instrument of torture he always charged you to look pleasant, please. Anybody who has looked through an old time album knows what the results were. There never was anything quite so ghastly, out of a charnel house, as the smiles people used to wear when being photographed.

"They were forced, unnatural smiles, my dear Mrs. Jiggers, like the smiles of your optimists. A man can't smile gracefully and sincerely unless something amuses him, and this life we live never amused any sane human being. So, by all means, let me have some more strawberries."

"I See by the Papers."

Did you ever stop to think of the deep significance of the above oft-repeated colloquialism?

It is estimated that more than 95 per cent of the population of the United States that can read are newspaper readers.

The quotation, or rather the unversal repetition, of the same thought signifies to what a tremendous extent the public depends upon the press for its ideas and daily information.

Not so very long ago "I see by the papers" referred nearly always to some news happening, but today the expression is just as likely to indicate store news—advertising news: the arrival of some choice merchandise, some change in style, a new idea in apparel, or any one of a hundred interesting and constantly changing bits of information which crowd the pages of the reliable daily papers like THE COURIER.

There is, indeed, much worth while that one may "see by the papers" if he will but study the advertising pages.

First Accident of Its Kind on a Crossing in Scottdale.

THE VETERAN MAIL CARRIERS

Two of Them Have Seen Service Ever Since Free Delivery Was Established Ten Years Ago; Other Bits of News Gathered About the Busy Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, June 6.—The first accident of the kind in town took place Thursday evening in the collision of an automobile and a motorcycle on a street intersection. Dr. L. T. Gilbert was coming up Pittsburg street in his automobile while C. A. Stoner was coming up Grove street on his motorcycle. A number who were standing at the intersection of the streets say that Dr. Gilbert blew his horn for the corner and that Mr. Stoner's machine was also making the usual noise. Doctor Gilbert had just made the top of the Pittsburg street hill and Mr. Stoner and he met where the streets cross each other. The coming into the crossing had been so closely timed that neither could have avoided the other. Doctor Gilbert took the far side of Pittsburg street as far as he could get suddenly and threw on the emergency brake until the spectators said the wheels smoked. Mr. Stoner tried to make the turn but could not clear make it and the motorcycle struck the auto, the front wheel striking the front fender, the rider's body striking the bed of the auto, and the rear wheel striking the rear fender, according to descriptions and the marks on the machines. The rider was thrown off, but said afterward he did not feel injured. The fenders of the auto were bent and the headlight of the motorcycle broken and the framework bent slightly. It was a surprise to many who saw it that the accident was not far more serious.

CHAPTER VIII.

Miss Hampton and Her Secret.

MARTHA wouldn't of took anything fur being around Miss Hampton, she said. Miss Hampton was kind of quiet and sweet and pale looking, and nobody ever thought of talking loud or raising any fuss when she was around. She had enough money of her own to run herself on, and she kep' to herself a good deal. She had come to that town from no one knowed where years ago and bought that place. Fur all of her being so gentle and easy and talking with one of them soft, drawly kind of voices, Martha says, no one had ever dared to ast her about herself, though they was a lot of women in that town that was wishful to.

But Martha said she knowed what Miss Hampton's secret was, and she hadn't told no one, neither. Which she told me and all the promising I done about not telling would of made the cold chills run up your back, it was so soletun. Miss Hampton had been jilted years ago, Martha said, and the name of the jilter was David Armstrong. Well, he must of been a low down sort of man. Martha said if things was only fixed in this country like they ought to be she would of sent a night to find that David Armstrong. And that would of ended up in a mortal combat, and the night would have cleaved him!

"Yes," says I, "and then you would of married that there night, I suppose."

She says she would of.

"Well," says I, "mebby you would of and mebby you wouldn't of. If he cleaved David Armstrong that night would likely be arrested fur it."

Martha says if he was she would wait outside his dungeon keep fur years and years till she was a old woman with gray in her hair, and every day they would give lingering looks at each other through the window bars. And they would be happy that-a-way.

She Had Fainted and Keeled Over.

Well, I never took no stock in them mournful ways of being happy. I couldn't of fix up to being a night fur Martha. She expected too much of one. I thought it over fur a little spell without saying anything, and I tried to make myself believe I would of liked all that night business. But it wasn't no use pertending. I knowed I would get tired of it.

So I changed the subject and asts her why I ain't seen Miss Hampton around the place none. Martha says she has a bad sick headache and ain't been outside the house fur four or five days. I asts her why she don't walt on her. But she don't want her to, Martha says. She's been staying in the house ever since we been in town and jest wants to be let alone. I thinks all that is kind of funny, and then I seen from the way Martha is answering my questions that she is holding back something she would like to tell, but don't think she orter tell. I leaves her alone.

When she said it was a secret I knowed she would tell. Martha liked having her friends help her to keep a secret.

"I think Miss Hampton has seen a ghost," she says finally, "and that her staying indoors has something to do with that."

Then she tells me. The night of the day after we camped there her and Miss Hampton was out fur a walk. We didn't have any show that night. They passed right by our camp, and they seen us there by the fire, all three of us. But they was in the road in the dark, and we was all in the light, so none of the three of us seen them. Miss Hampton was kind of scared of us first glance, fur she gasped and grabbed holt of Martha's arm all of a sudden so tight she pinched it. Which it was very natcheral that she would be startled, coming across three strange men all of a sudden at night around a turn in the road. They went along home, and Martha went inside and lighted a lamp, but Miss Hampton lingered on the porch fur a minute. Jest as she lit the lamp Martha hearn another little gasp or kind of sigh from Miss Hampton out there on the porch. Then they was the sound of her falling down. Martha run out with the lamp, and she was laying there. She had fainted and keeled over. Martha said jest in the minute she had left her alone on the porch was when Miss Hampton must of seen the ghost. Martha brung her to, and she was looking puzzled and wildlike both to once. Martha asts her what is the matter.

Miss Hampton looks at Martha awful funny, and then she says mebby she has seen a ghost and goes along upstairs to bed. And since then she ain't been out of the house. She tells Martha it is a sick headache, but Martha says she knows it ain't. She thinks she is scared of something.

"Scared?" I says. "She wouldn't see no more ghosts in the daytime."

Martha says how do I know she wouldn't? She knows a lot about ghosts of all kinds, Martha does. Horses and dogs can see them easier than humans, even in the daytime, and it makes their hair stand up when they do. But some humans that have the gift can see them in the daytime like an animal. And Martha asts me how can I tell but Miss Hampton is like that?

"Well, then," I says, "she must be a witch. And if she is a witch why is she scared of them a-tall?"

But Martha says if you have second sight you don't need to be a witch to see them in the daytime.

Well, with all the talking back and forth we done about them ghosts we couldn't agree. That afternoon it seemed like we couldn't agree about anything. I knowed we would be going away from there before long, and I says to myself before I go I'm going to have that girl fur my girl, or else know the reason why. No matter what I was talking about, that idea was in the back of my head, and somehow it kind of made me want to pick fusses with her, too. We was setting on a log, purty deep into the woods, and there come a time when neither of us had said nothing fur quite a spell. But after awhile I says:

She never said nothing.

"Will you be sorry?" I asts her.

She says she will be sorry.

"Well," I says, "why will you be sorry?"

I thought she would say because I was going. And then I would be finding out whether she liked me a lot. But she says the reason she will be sorry is because there will be no one now to talk to about things both has read. I was considerable took down when she said that.

"Martha," I says, "it's more'n likely I won't never see you agin after I go away."

She says that kind of parting comes between the best of friends.

I seen I wasn't getting along very fast nor saying what I wanted to say. I reckon one of them Sir Marmeluke fellers would of knowed what to say or Dr. Kirby would, or mebby even Locey would of said it better than I could. So I was kind of mad with myself, and I says mean like:

"If you don't care, of course I don't care neither."

She never answered that, so I gets up and makes like I am starting off.

"I was going to give you some of them there Injun feathers of mine to remember me by," I tells her, "but if you don't want 'em there's plenty of others would be glad to take 'em."

But she says she would like to have them.

"Well," I says, "I will bring them to you tomorrow afternoon."

She says, "Thank you."

Finally I couldn't stand it no longer. I got brave all of a sudden and busted out, "Martha, I—I—I"—

But I got to stuttering, and my braveness stuttered itself away, and I finished up by saying:

"I like you a hull lot, Martha." Which wasn't jest exactly what I had planned fur to say.

Martha, she says she kind of likes me too.

"Martha," I says, "I like you more'n any girl I ever run across before."

She says, "Thank you," agin. The way she said it riled me up. She said it like she didn't know what I meant, nor what I was trying to get out of me. But she did know all the time. I knowed she did. She knowed I knowed it too. Gosh dern it, I says to myself, here I am wasting all this time jest talking to her. The right thing to do come to me all of a sudden and like to took my breath away. But I done it. I grabbed her and I kissed her.

Twice. And then agin. Because the first was on the chin on account of her jerking her head back. And the second one she didn't help me none. But the third time she helped me a little. And the ones after that she helped me considerable.

Well, they ain't no use trying to talk about the rest of that afternoon. I couldn't rightly describe it if I wanted to. And I reckon it's none of anybody's business.

Well, it makes you feel kind of funny. You want to go out and pick on somebody about four sizes bigger'n you are and knock the socks off'n him. It stands to reason others has felt that-a-way, but you don't believe it. You want to tell people about it one minute. The next minute you have got chills and ague fur fear some one will guess it. And you think the way you are about her is going to last fur always.

That evening, when I was cooking supper, I laughed every time I was spoke to. When Locey and I was hitching up to drive downtown to give the show, one of the bosses stepped on his foot and I laughed at that, and there was purty nigh a fight. After the show, when we got back to camp and the hosses was picketed out fur the night, I had to tell Locey all about how I felt fur an explanation of why I laughed at him.

Which it made Locey right low in his sperrits, and he shakes his head and says no good will come of it.

"But it ends happy sometimes," I says.

"Not when it is true love it don't," says Locey. "Look at Anthony and Cleopatra."

"Yes," I says, "and so is Adam and Eve and Dan and Burrsheba and all the rest of them old timers. But I bet they had a good time while they lasted."

Locey shakes his head solemn and sighs and goes to sleep very mournful, like he has to give me up fur lost. But I can't sleep none myself. So purty soon I gets up and puts on my shoes and sneaks through the woodlot and through the gap in the fence by the apple tree and into Miss Hampton's yard.

It was a beauty of a moonlight night, that white and clear and clean you could almost see to read by it, like all of everything had been scoured as bright as the bottom of a tin pan. And the shadders was soft and thick and velvety and laid kind of brownish-greeney on the grass. I flopped down in the shadder of some lilac bushes and wondered which was Martha's window. I knowed she would be in bed long ago, but—well, I was jest plumb foolish that night, and I couldn't of kept away fur any money. That moonlight had got into my head, it seemed like, and made me drunk.

The porch of that house was part covered with vines, but they was kind of gaped apart at one corner. As I laid there in the shadder of the bushes I hearn a fluttering movement, light and gentle, on that porch. Then all of a sudden I seen some one standing on the edge of the porch where the vines was gaped apart, and the moonlight was falling on to them. They must of come there awful soft and still. Whoever it was couldn't see into the shadder where I laid—that is, it in was a human and not a ghost. Fur my first thought was it might be one of them ghosts I had been running down so that very day, and mebby the same one Miss Hampton seen on that very same porch. I thought I was in fur it then, mebby, and I felt like some one had whispered to the back of my neck it ought to be scared. And I was scared clean up into my hair. I stared hard, fur I couldn't take my eyes away. Then purty soon I seen if it was a ghost it must be a woman ghost. Fur it was dressed in light colored clothes that moved jest a little in the breeze, and the clothes was so near the color of the moonlight they seemed to kind of sliver into it. You would of said it had jest floated there and was waiting fur to float away agin when the breeze blowed a little stronger or the moon drawed it.

It didn't move fur ever so long. Then it leaned forward through the gap in the vines, and I seen the face real plain. It wasn't no ghost—it was a lady. Then I knowed it must be Miss Hampton standing there. Away off through the trees our camp fire sent up jest a dull kind of a glow. She was standing there looking at that. I wondered why.

SECRETARY BAER TELLS WHY HE IS AGAINST SMOKING

Not Permitted in Y. M. C. A. Because it Sets a Bad Example.

NOT TO ENCOURAGE YOUNG MEN

Cigarets Bad for School Boys, Secretary Says, and Offers Figures to Prove It; Quotes Educator Who Believes Smoking is Worse Than Drink.

Secretary E. T. Baer of the Y. M. C. A. has the reputation among those who know him well of being unusually broad-minded in carrying out the work he has undertaken here. For that reason, the question has arisen from time to time, principally among men who enjoy a pipe or cigar when they read or chat, why there is no smoking room at the Y. M. C. A. building. Here is Mr. Baer's reply.

"I have frequently been asked whether smoking is permitted in the Y. M. C. A., and when I replied in the negative, have been asked if it would not be a good thing to have at least one room in which men could smoke. This is my answer:

"Cigarettes were introduced into the United States at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. Last year the number manufactured in the United States was over 8,000,000,000, a number so enormous that no mind can grasp it. Worse still, the increase over the preceding year, was more than 25 per cent. It is more than probable that the next year's statistics will show an increase to more than ten billions. How many millions of these are consumed by boys in their early teens, or younger, cannot be determined, but statistics recently gathered in Pittsburg show that more than half the school boys under 15 were smoking cigarettes habitually. I have made inquiry among school men and have yet to find one who is not positive as to the ruinous effect of cigarettes upon growing boys. In some instances cigarette smokers are practically debarred from schools for the reason that their time in the schools is as good as wasted, and they discredit the school.

'The following statistics are but a sample of many others: these having been taken from the same classes in the same schools, the ages of the boys ranging from 10 to 17 years, averaging 14. The reports were made impartially by 10 teachers, the boys being under observation for a number of months:

	Smokers	Non Smokers
Nervous	14	1
Poor Memory	12	1
Bad Manners	18	2
Low Deportment	13	1
Poor Physical Condition	12	2
Bad Moral Condition	14	0
Ba dMental Condition	18	1
Street Loafers	16	0
Out Nights	15	0
Careless in Dress	12	4
Truants	10	0
Impaired Hearing	13	1
Low Rank in Studies	18	3
Failed in Promotion, times	79	2
Older than Average of Grade	10	2
Slow Thinkers	10	3
Poor Workers	17	1

'These figures were taken from the Temperance Education Quarterly.

"Within the past year a prominent educator said to me: 'If I had my choice of abolishing completely either the liquor traffic or the cigarette traffic I should unhesitatingly choose to abolish the cigarette traffic as the more dangerous.' I believe he was right.

"You ask, 'But what has all this to do with men smoking in the Y. M. C. A.?' This: I believe the only reason any boy ever wants to learn to smoke is that he sees men smoking. His one overmastering ambition is to be a man. He is logical in his conclusion that the things men do must be manly. He cannot afford cigars or even tobies, but can beg or buy cigarettes. They are the nearest approach he can make to the manly habit of smoking. Before he is responsible for his own actions the habit is so fixed upon him that he cannot let it go.

"Not long ago a young fellow said to me 'I know cigarettes are killing me, but I can't quit them.' He was honest, and had tried again and again to get away from the habit. We feel that allowing smoking in the Young Men's Christian Association would be un-christian in its influence among the boys to whome we are expected to set an example of clean, strong, true manhood. No Y. M. C. A. with which I am connected will ever have a smoking room."

SOUTHERN COKE IN DEMAND.

Coke producers of the Birmingham district are getting good prices for both furnace and foundry coke. The 72-hour coke is being held firmly around $4 a ton, with $3 50 to $3.75 being paid for 48-hour grades. This is the price at the ovens.

The Empire Coal Company has just been given an order for 6,000 tons of foundry coke by a California beet-sugar manufacturer. The Pratt Consolidated Coal & Iron Company has been given an additional contract for coke for Mexican smelters. New ovens are planned to meet the demand for Alabama coke which has been developed in Mexico during the past two years.

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

At a store that buys big you are certain to get extra quality, and this fact is easily proven here.

Foreign Made Hats From England, Italy, Etc, $2.50, $3, to $4.
